

Personal statement

From my infancy I have undergone myriads of stumbling blocks. Needless to say, at that time , as a young kid with not complete understanding of the puzzles of life. I always felt a deep necessity for magic hands that could radically convert my life style with the one is true hard to envision, but something I am sure, associated with brightness, a full of joy and happiness, and more importantly a satisfaction and smile of my mother that she had a son who plays a key role among his community. From my childhood, I was thought about great achievements that could be obtained by virtue of study and being well-educated. And my eagerness towards leadership let me complete my schools with success and be among top 15 students of school by the end of studies.

After having graduated school with excellent marks, I was highly recommended by my school administration to maintain my further education at one of the most prestigious lyceums of my city. As I started my lyceum, I realized that only by doing my best at education I could become a leading figure among my peers. Having spent my first year study by reading authors such as Anthony Robbins, Napoleon Hill and Dale Carnegie's books broadened my horizons. I have undergone, this time I was quite confident both morally and corporally with such an attitude I managed to have a mediocre knowledge of English language within five months, by virtue 6-7 hours self-study preparation. Presumably, my passion and the process of growth in terms of learning language that I had , gave rise to another warmth in the relationship with my aforementioned relative whom I afterwards persuaded to be my tutor. At the time I was also giving English lessons for free for my neighbors, which had later became a part of my life when I was employed by one of the most outstanding educational centers of Fergana called Compass. During my working days over there, I realized the competitiveness among different educational centers and also the high demand for marketing.

Critical reflection

At this moment, I am an individual who knows his whole potential, also I found myself to be totally appropriate to the management faculty of TEAM (Tashkent Entrepreneurship and Management University). Since I was the first child in my family in which there were 4 children in total, it gave a genuine sense of leadership. Every once in a while, siblings approached me asking for a piece of advice, I did my direct them into a right path. For example, it has been increasingly difficult for my sister pick of a university to apply for lately, and she was really worried about it and needed help. First and perhaps the most reliable university I knew was Team university. I immediately recommended her to prepare for the entry exams which is I think one of important traits of leaders.

Regarding my leadership skills, prior to applying for Team university I had been working as a teacher of general English at Compass education center. Having been employed there for almost one year, I honed number of stunning skills like public speaking, motivating and help people in need. A shiny example would be relation between me and my students. I tended to organise regular football matches together, and there I was the one who would divide people into teams and was the leader of my own team. m teammates would include even more talented and professional players, we would win the games often times under my supervision and their gifts.
